Sex, Love, And Fashion: A Memoir Of A Male Model

Synopsis

You may think youâ™ve heard everything about the modeling industry from Tyra Banks, but Sex, Love, and Fashion is the real behind-the-scenes scoop, from a true insider who is considered one of the top ten male models of all time. In the glamorous galaxy of modeling, Bruce Hulse was a supernova. Taken under the wing of famed photographer Bruce Weber as a fledgling model, Hulse went on to collaborate with the industryâ™s biggest names as one of the worldâ™s top male models. In the 1980s and 1990s, the exciting world of top models was filled with sex, drugs, and countless other indulgences. Bruce Hulse is one of the most recognizable figures of that time; from his iconic Calvin Klein and Levi's ads to his appearance on the cover of GQ, his face defined an era. In Sex, Love, and Fashion, Bruce shares the true stories of his globe-trotting career working with some of the industryâ™s biggest namesâ€”Calvin Klein, Janice Dickinson, Herb Ritts, Elle Macpherson, Andie MacDowell, Paulina Porizkova, and Cindy Crawford among themâ€”and also details the exhilarating successes and painful failures he experienced on his way to the top. Bruce Hulse pulls back the curtain on the life of an international supermodel and reveals everything the cameras donâ™t expose. Sex, Love, and Fashion is a dishy, sexy, and honest look at what really happens to beautiful people playing in the often decadent fields of fashion glory.

Customer Reviews

Bruce Hulse proves that there really is more to life than being really, really, ridiculously good looking. He's very much a dude, but one with depth and decency. As a young man, Hulse is sensitive and questioning; he's into yoga, ashrams, vegetarianism, and all things spiritually enlightening. But he was also a regular guy shooting hoops, surfing, hooking up with chicks, and hanging out with buddies Shoe, The Glenn, Stooover, Scarhead, and Doc X. Doc X is the quintessential bro whose habit of referring to himself in the third person will no doubt send female readers' eyes a-rolling: "Doc X stays in the X Mansion. People come to see Doc X...Doc X doesn't go to see people. That's the Doc X way." All this "find-myself" time gave him some ballast when he entered the modeling whirlwind. Parisian modeling agency flunkie Jocelyn catches newbie Hulse meditating and informs him about the fashion facts of life: "I know about religion, and it's-how you say?-evil. If you want to be a model, cherie, then you'll have to put all that behind you. Fashion is a world of materialism and appearance and instant gratification. If you try to cling to things you believe in, you'll be in big trouble." Despite his best efforts to fight this militantly shallow view of life, Hulse finds himself swept up in the fantasy and sensuality of the business. He goes from banging nails as a carpenter for just above minimum wage, to $1,500-a-day modeling gigs and banging...well, let's just say he knew goddesses Paulina Porizkova, Andie Macdowell, Elle Macpherson, and Tatjana Patitz in the Biblical sense. After the novelty wears off, he's brave enough to confront himself: "I had always seen myself as one of the good guys. Now I felt like just another jerk."
