I just bought this to use for valentines (my first as an adult) and I LOVE it. There's nothing love-letter themed about the pages so you can use them as simple notes for any reason. Several different patterns and colors, too! And thick enough that sharpie pen doesn't bleed through. Just one page so not too much pressure to be prolific, and if you have a sweetheart or long distance connection, the prompts on the inner cover are cute.

This book by: Hannah Brencher is actually not a book for reading. Instead it is a collection of All-in-One Stationery and Envelopes. Each page is both a lined page to write letters and an envelope. Simply tear out the page, write a letter, fold the page in half, moisten the glue strip and fold it over the letter, write the mailing address, and add a stamp! Then it is ready to send to the recipient! There are 40 of these pages and 40 sticker seals. On the inside covers, there are 40 suggested ideas for what to write in your letters. Some romantic, some to friends or family members, and some for personal reflection. I absolutely love the idea of the letter and envelope in one page. It is a neat concept for stationery. There is nothing on the pages that distinguishes them as love letters so they can be used for any type of letters that you want to write. However, I was very disappointed with the colors and patterns used on the pages. The three main colors choices are salmon, yellow and grey. The designs in my opinion are ugly. I honestly do not know why these colors and designs were chosen for "love letter" stationery. I hope that more of these books are created but with much better color choices and designs to choose from. In accordance with the Federal Trade Commission I am required to disclose that Crown Publishing Group provided this book for free in exchange for my review. I was not required to write a positive review and the opinions I have expressed are my own.

Very nice! I love writing letters on these. There is not an endless amount of space to write, and the lines are pretty far aligned, but the colors are nice. I use it for actual love letters as well as letters to friends and family.

I love my stationery! I've already used it to write a 2015 letter as well as one to a long time friend. I also love that there are suggestions for letter writing to significant others as well as for those who are not currently romantically involved. The designs are adorable and though I wish there were a bit more space, overall it's inspired me to write more letters because the world needs more love letters! :)

The World Needs More Love Letters - All-in-One Stationery and Envelopes, by Hannah Brencher is the cutest blast-from-the-past that I've seen in a long time. I used to use this kind of stationery back in the 80s when the world was a better place. Simple to use, just tear out a patterned sheet (there are many to choose from) and write your note on one side and then fold and seal with the enclosed stickers. The other side has a spot for the addresses and the stamp. Can't think of anything to write? The creator of the book has a list of forty ideas to get you started, they are on the inside of the covers. This is an adorable item, would make a nice gift for someone who is going away to college, a couple that's going to be separated for a while, or anyone who feels like being nostalgic and writing a real letter. Nothing will ever take the place of a real letter. Remember how good it felt to find a note addressed to you in your mailbox? Share the feeling!

I've really enjoyed using this to write letters. I already had topics in mind but it's nice that the person who made it put together a list of ideas in the front cover to help you out if you're staring at the page and need some inspiration. While I don't love the pattern choices, they don't bother me either. There's 4 designs for your letters and envelopes. The letter is on one side and when you fold it then it becomes the envelope. That's very nice because it's so simple. The paper is like a thicker card stock and has a strip to seal the envelope. However, mine wouldn't seal. There are plain white envelope seals included so I used those but I also put a small bit of tape on each side of it to keep it fully closed. One thing I'd like to note is that when you close the envelope and seal it, the sides are a bit open. That's the downside to it all being one piece is that the sides aren't folded over at all and it makes the contents inside not entirely private. Also, if you plan to put anything in the envelope you would need to tape the sides. If you like writing letters, whether to be mailed or just given, I think this is a great set. I paid around $8 and I think it has 40 letters. A pretty good deal and I'm looking forward to using the rest!

I had signed up for the "More Love Letters" program (look it up, its great) and so I greatly increased the number of letters that I was writing. I wanted to get some cute stationary and found this. What I love about this book is that everything that I need is in this, which makes it easy to keep in my backpack or bag. When you first open the book, there are 40 suggestions to provide you with letter writing inspiration. Then, the station begins. On the front side, there are five different types of designs; on the back sides, there are also give designs. The back designs do not match the front designs. Then, in the back there are sheets of white stickers; you put one on each side of the letter once its folded. I really appreciate the stationary side. There are enough lines to write a solid letter, but you couldn't write a novel. This wouldn't work if you typically write more than one page in a letter. For me, this was the perfect length to write a good message, story and pleasantries. Additionally, when I babysit and they need to write notes, they LOVE this paper. It makes it fun and enjoyable for them so I don't even have to ask twice. Cons: I think there could be more color variation. The main color throughout all the designs is a deep salmon color. I would love some more variety in the color scheme. When folding the letter, the lines aren't as perfectly measured out as they should be. If you fold them exactly, there is some bubbling up. I have to make new lines where I fold them to get it to lay perfectly flat. I also wish there was a pocket for me to keep my stamps in. Overall: I will buy these All-in-One letters again.
